Antique Native American Copper Bracelet Keweenaw Peninsula

This item is an antique native american copper bracelet. It is attributed to the Cliff Mine region of Michigan's Upper Peninsula. This may have been created by the indigenous Objibwa. This item originally sold by the Michigan mineral dealer. Thomas Bee, to another mineral dealer, C. Carter Rich, and then passed to me. It is quite delicate with a spring-like copper coil wrapped around the copper bracelet. This item is quite unique and beautiful.

Rare Pre Columbian "Patojo" Pot - Ometepe Island, Nicaragua, c.800 AD - 1200 AD

Patojo Pot from Ometepe Island. Nicaragua-Nicaro Culture 800-1200 A.D Normal 0 false false false EN-US X-NONE X-NONE. This is a rare"patojo" pot from Ometepe Island. Nicaragua and made around 1000 years ago by the Nicaro culture(a branch of the Greater Nicoya Culture) Ometepe Island is located in Lake Nicaragua and it's name means two volcanoes. This is an interesting and rare piece of pre-Columbian pottery that it is decorated in the form of a guinea pig with eyes on either side and a snout at the tip of the pot. A"patojo" pot is called this because it is commonly made in the shape of a shoe, which is pronounced"patojo" in Spanish. These were made by pre-Columbian cultures all over the Americas and the reason for this is that these pots allowed the user to dip into the warm contents from the pot while the ... more
